Secure Group Communications Over Data Networks

secure group communications using key graphs - networking ... - the technical issues of securing group communications are not. conceptually, since every point-to-multipoint communication can be represented as a set of point-to-point communications, the current technology base for securing unicast communications can be extended in a straightforward manner to secure group communications [12], [13]. interoperable, secure group communication - secure, highly-scalable solutions for today's most demanding communications environments: connect radio to radio connect multiple, disparate two-way radio systems and remove barriers to communication interoperability and workforce collaboration. extend radio to broadband extend workforce communications beyond secure group communications for delay-tolerant networks - and providing for secure group communications over unknown intermediate networks is essential. we propose a novel solution based on previous work in secure group communications using key-graphs and in extension to work on scalable access authorization in self-organizing overlays to provide a scalable mechanism scalable hierarchical access control in secure group ... - scalable hierarchical access control in secure group communications yan sun and k. j. ray liu department of electrical and computer engineering and the institute of systems research university of marylandllge park. secure group communications over combined wired/wireless ... - secure group communications over combined wired/wireless networks 3 and message complexities. without respect to the number of users, our scheme requires only a constant number of communication rounds and furthermore achieves optimal message complexity [3]. communication complexity is especially relevant in secure group communications for wireless networks - 1 secure group communications for wireless networks b. declene 1, l. dondeti2, s. griffin, t. hardjono2, d. kiwior1, j. kurose 3, d. townsley , s. vasudevan 3, c. zhang 1litton/tasc 2nortel networks 3university of massachusetts reading, ma billerica, ma amherst, ma abstract in this paper we consider the problem of key management a multi-ring framework for survivable and secure group ... - a multi-ring framework for survivable and secure group communications (extended abstract) jun wang, william yurcik {wangj, byurcik}@ncsa.uiuc i. introduction survivable and secure group communications are critical in military environments, especially for command and control (c2) systems. existing solutions to group communications may secure group communications over data networks - viii secure group communications over data networks 2.4.1 layers, clusters and keys 28 2.4.2 key management 30 2.4.3 clustering protocol 33 2.5 n-party diffie-hellman key exchange suite 37 communications-electronics security group - csrc - communications-electronics security group. communications-electronics security group excellence in infosec. information assurance for uk government internet, intranet and extranet ... government secure intranet (gsi) • infrastructure for "open" government - baseline for future connectivity (modernising government) secure group communications using key graphs* - group communications will accelerate in coming years. while the technical issues of securing unicast communications for client-server computing are fairly well understood, the technical issues of securing group communications are not. yet group communications have a much greater ex-
